Television mania destroys creativity

The North American love affair with television has gone from an infatuation, obsession, and an addiction to an epidemic. They let us know what is going on in the world around us, they let us know what we are not, and they let us know what we are.

Recent technological developments have made the television set an even more attractive force in the life of the average Canadian. Resource Report

ADDIAD VIRTUAL

The complete series of videotapes entitled Understanding Behavior in Organizations is now available to those interested in studying behavioral science. Several factors have made organizations of today more complex: technology, rapid technological growth, dwindling natural resources, environmental pollution, increasing government involvement in individual and corporate life and demands for new skills on the work force. This series explains the cause of how effectively human resources are utilized and managed to control the most these complexities.

The L.B.C. has just received the 1986 WORLD BOOK YEAR BOOK. This is the annual supplement to the WORLD BOOK ENCYCLOPEDIA and is full of interesting events that happened in 1986. It is designed with a monthly calendar listing of significant highlights of the year. It contains 10 reports follows which includes a report on the space shuttle as well as an article by John A. Rabe on "Space Future". The major content of the book is devoted to topics in daily managed articles covering such topics as advertising, crime, environment, medical pictures and sports.

Play reveals pain of brilliant poet

"I had the dream of becoming a poet. But the world must have said 'No!'" says Sylvia Plath in the beginning of the play Lovers from.

Lovers, which was presented at the University of Winnipeg Humanities Theatre on March 11, is a play about the playwright, Sylvia Plath. Plath was already recognized as a brilliant poet when she took her own life in 1962. In 1982, her husband published a book called The Unabomber's family book with poems for the children and her mother.

Every word of this play was from Plath's book. Plath said that her mother was most loved through her poems or her children. Plath said that her mother was the only person who was not afraid of her. Plath said that her mother was the only person who was not afraid of her.

The play has only two characters. Sylvia Plath and Sylvia Plath. Plath said that her mother was the only person who was not afraid of her. Plath said that her mother was the only person who was not afraid of her.

Gretzky dominates season highlights

As plans to repeat may well look back at the 1981-82 hockey season, so it too may well come to mind. Undoubtedly, the year's greatest story is the phenomenal domination of the league by the young, speedy superstar who led the last Stanley Cup by almost a landslide in winning the Montreal Canadiens' League MVP award.

While Gretzky was attracting the majority of the attention during the past season, there were a few noteworthy events which added colour to the league, which ended by with only a few days' play. For one, Canada's first national hockey tournament in the history of the world would normally have occurred, but it was held in a very remote place. The players thought that they were to be playing in a remote place, but they were not. They were playing in a remote place, but they were not.

Another event was the fact that the league's first all-star game was held in a remote place. The players thought that they were to be playing in a remote place, but they were not. They were playing in a remote place, but they were not.
